

Being courteous and showing respect to landowners and other visitors is critically important. If you don't have permission to be on private lands, then you may not be welcome. Good manners are a prerequisite for visits to the elk range and will help lead to a more positive experience for all. Patience and tolerance will aid you and your family in dealing with traffic and others who are drawn to see the elk herd.

Public Viewing Areas
 Considered to be the heart of Pennsylvania's elk country, the town of Benzetze is located along State Route 555 in Elk County. With patience and a little luck, elk can be seen from roadways throughout their range. The following elk-viewing areas are some of the best places for you to experience elk and wildlife watching:

The Elk Country Visitor Center, located on Winslow Hill in Benzetze, is the result of a public-private partnership between the Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources and the Keystone Elk Country Alliance. Since opening in 2010, the center has become the hub of elk-viewing activity. It offers visitors panoramic views, interactive exhibits, horse-drawn wagon rides, a 4D immersive story theater, and educational programs. On the beautiful grounds you can explore well-maintained trails, elk and wildlife observation areas, and viewing blinds.

The Winslow Hill Viewing Area offers a large parking lot atop a spectacular mountain with a walk-up viewing area overlooking a large meadow where elk often gather. It is located near the intersection of Winslow Hill Road and Dewey Road.

Woodring Farm features a ½-mile interpretive hiking trail that encircles more than 80 acres of prime elk-viewing habitat and an overlook with incredible views. The farm is located about ½ mile from the Winslow Hill Viewing Area.

The Dents Run Viewing Area, located 3½ miles from Route 555 on Winslow Hill Road, is a very popular elk-viewing area with off-road parking. A handicap-accessible walkway leads to an overlook where interpretive displays teach visitors about the elk herd.

The Hicks Run Viewing Area, located 8½ miles east of Benzetze on Route 555, features a covered handicapped-accessible viewing blind that provides an exceptional viewing experience to watch elk undetected as they feed in a lush food plot.

Elk Viewing in Elk County
 To increase your chances of seeing elk, time your viewing adventures for the hour or two after dawn or before dusk, when elk are most active as they move from feeding areas in open fields to sheltered woodlands where they spend most of their day.

Safety
 For everyone's safety, don't stop in the road, pull off onto the shoulder, park in private driveways or on private property, or block traffic when viewing elk. Never attempt to approach, touch, or feed elk or any other wildlife. Please remain a safe distance from all wildlife and remember that elk are quick and unpredictable free-roaming wild animals.

Courtesy and Respect
 Being courteous and showing respect to landowners and other visitors is critically important. If you don't have permission to be on private lands, then you may not be welcome. Good manners are a prerequisite for visits to the elk range and will help lead to a more positive experience for all. Patience and tolerance will aid you and your family in dealing with traffic and others who are drawn to see the elk herd.

Simenahoning State Park in nearby Cameron County has a small resident elk herd, viewing platforms, an interactive Wildlife Center, and opportunities for wildlife watching.
